PRIDAY MORNING, SEPT. 17, 1858

Self-Concelt of John Bull. John Bull is proverbial for his self-conceit. He has a reputation for being almost as fond of We have only room to add a portion of the Prehis own opinion as he is of his 'alf and 'alf - miums awarded, which we clip from the Regis-He thinks he is incapable of making himself ter. ridiculous, no matter how many ridiculous things he may really do. If his neighbor should act differently from what he considers to be proper, he will endeavor, with a condescension that is excessively amusing, to throw the blight of his ridicule on him.

To illustrate this peculiarity of Uncle Bull, we copy the following extract from an article in the London Times, poking fun at the universal Yankeee notion for allowing themselves to be carried away by their enthusiasm over the suc-

ees ful laying of the cable: "There were as many salutes as at Cherbourg; three hundred and thirty-three guns from the hatteries; a hundred guns here, a hundred there; a hundred mouster rock biasts in the Central Park, and some heavy salistes from the top of the Astar Hotel. All the church bells were rung. Every house was illuminated in that ex-tempore fashion which tells better than our own builliant uniformity. All the world was out in the streets. There were the banners of every nation and of no nation, and transparencies with sentiments, verses, pans, allegories and devices, in which, if England had not quite its due meed of honor, it was not at least forgotten. The Agamemnon was the greatest of kings; Cyrus, the new, made a grander union than that of Media and Persis; the cable had opened a new Field of usefulness; the Nragara and the Hudson had besten the Atlantic, and the union of the two worlds—it rends almost like a profancees -was actually ranked with the Declaration of Independence. The cable itself is declared to be the wedding-ring of the two cousins, to strongest bond of amity, the deed of eternal para-nership. But it is vain to think of beating our neighbors—now hardly translantic—at this sort of description. To wind up the day, there were volcanoes of tireworks, chiefly, as it appears to us, from the tops of the large buildings, concluding with the conflagration and destruction of the City Hall, from the zoof of which the principal volcano had been discharged. All this time we did not ring a bell, or let off a squib, or light a kitchen dip, or even walk out into the streets, or do anything whatever in honor of the event. In all England we believe that not one man congratulated his neighbor about it — We were all pleased in our own quiet fashion, and somewhat surprised at so complete a success coming so quickly on the heels of repeated fail-

The Times then goes on to chuckle over the message sent by Mayor Tieman to the Lord Mayor of Lendon, inviting him and the rest of the world to join in a grand Cable fandango; and dwells with a great amount of self-gratulation over the fact that Johnny Bull "kept cool" throughout the whole of that enthusiastic pe-

The Times forgot to say how excited Johnny became when Her Majesty visited Cherbourg, almost under compulsion, to attend the celebration of the completion of a series of fortificaexcited on that occasion, as his transatlantic cousin was during the hight of his cable enthusiness, with this difference that Jonathan hopped, danced, and burnt powder over the the completion of a great enterprise that is faught with blessings to mankind; while Johnny capered and burnshed over Cherbourg. Johnny capered and hurrahed over Cherbourg.

The Times cannot do better than to commit to memory the old adage, "People living in glass houses, should not throw stones."

The Register says : At precisely 10 o'clock the second gun was fired on board the Michigan, and immediately nineteen trim built barks were careering over the silvery Bay towards the first stake boat anchored off Cedar Point. The first four boats of the range appeared at first to shoot ahead of their companions; but were brought up upon, and the whole number of boats appeared to move for-ward as one mass. After passing the first stake-boat the Collins, of Cleveland, was seen to strike out considerably in advance of her competitors, constantly increasing the distance between them and herself in her flight toward the West. The sight presented to those on b and the Queen City, that went out to give excursionists an opportunity of witnessing the race, was indeed grand. The Collins was followed first by the Feliers, of Deiroit, and then the Raby, of Cleveland. These boats had rounded the second stake-boat at the upper drawbridge of the C. & T. Railroad, the Collins making excellent sneed and distancing exerciting on the collection of t of the C. & T. Raurossi, the Collins making ex-cellent speed and distancing everything on the course, when she was suddenly capsized. The other two boats sailed by her, and the steam tug Ningara went to her relief, taking off her

Another Love and Jealousy Affair-Weman Shot by her Lover

der 12 yrs, -

The Pittsburgh Chronicle of the 11th has the following: The most intense excitement was created in the city to-day, by a cowardly attempt on the part of a man named Thomas Smithson, to take the life of a young lady named Ellen Henry, to whom he was paying his addresses. Smithson, it would seem, had been paying his addresses to Miss Henry, but from what we present were attracted to the pond where they were being examined. A large proportion of the 125 entries were present, and persons accustomed to and competent to judge of stock, pronounced it a very superior collection. All present seemed to concur in the opinion that this collection, representing the improved exiting the superior and saw her little brother, to whom this collection, representing the improved exiting the superior of the concurrence of the concurrence of the collection, representing the improved exiting the superior of the collection. tions and basins, erected for the express purpose of menacing England. Johnny was as much Whether she saw him then or not we cannot say, but certain it is that he remained fully an hour in the house, during which Miss Henry was engaged in attending to some domestic duties along with her sisters. She betrayed very little desire to converse with Smithson, and told him that she was engaged and had not time to talk to him now. He insisted on conversing with her, whereupon she told him to go away, and was about passing into another room, when he delberately drew a pistol and discharged its contents in her back entents in her back.

The report of the pistol alarmed her mother and sister, who were in the yard attending to some matter or other, and they hurried in to scertain the cause of the explosion. Miss Henry met them in the passage, and declaring that she was shot, fell into her mother's arms. She was laid gently on a lounge and medical aid summoned, while messengers were dispatched to transaction. Drs McCook and McDonald were promptly on the ground, and made an examina on animal belonging to J H Perrine, of War-in co.

That such a man, at the age of eighty three, should disgrace himself by grossly libelling an innecent woman, persecuting her with the unmanity trick of anonymous letters, and by poems recking with filthy suggestions, is not compatitively with the theory of his sanity. We believe the with the theory of his sanity. We believe the with the theory of his sanity. We believe the sanity of th recking with filthy suggestions, is not compati-ble with the theory of his sanity. We believe it is but the columination of that eccentricity which has characterized his whole life, for, in fact, his conduct has been a series of desultory, unaccountable adventures and experiments, which nothing but his large tortune and social position has enabled him to include in. From his boyhood to the present time, he has exhibited a discontented, fickle nature, and his singular conduct has been a puzzle equally to his friends and the world. When a young student he was expelled from Oxford for the absurd freak of firing a gun in the college quadrangle. He would neither study law nor enter the army, although the most favorable inducements were offered in each profession. After a short bermitage in Wales, being suddenly fired with military enthusiasm, he became a Captain of troops raised at his own expense, and fought in the Spanish service against France. Return-ing to Great Britain without any necessity, he self from England.
